KUALA LUMPUR: A special action committee has been formed to look into the issue of poor attendance for the Sijil Pelajaran Malaysia examination.

Deputy Education Minister Wong Kah Woh said the committee is called the Special Action Committee for the Attendance of SPM Candidates for the 2024/25 Session.

He said this was the latest move in the ministry's intervention plan, alongside strengthening the implementation of existing programmes.

Other programmes, said Wong, include utilising psychometric assessments to gather information on psychological traits from a mental or emotional perspective, to help students recognise their personalities and make decisions based on their abilities.
