NEW STRAITS TIMES

Education Ministry to introduce additional 400 hybrid classes next year

By Nor Ain Mohamed Radhi, Iylia Marsya Iskandar - October 16, 2024 @ 3:48pm

The Education Ministry plans to expand the hybrid class pilot project to an additional 400 classes in selected schools in urban and rural areas next year, said deputy minister Wong Kah Woh. (Bernama Pic)

KUALA LUMPUR: The Education Ministry plans to expand the hybrid class pilot project to an additional 400 classes in selected schools in urban and rural areas next year.

Deputy Education Minister Wong Kah Woh told the Dewan Rakyat that it was part of the ministry's efforts to develop digital skills within the learning ecosystem.

He said this has been implemented in 110 selected educational institutions, including rural schools.

The move was in line with Core 4: Empowering Infrastructure and Infostructure under the National Education Policy.